Colorado Gets Major Snowstorm

DENVER (AP) Colorado's first major snowstorm of the season has hit the state under a white blanket today and the weather bureau predicted light snow would continue most of the day.

The storm caused at least four deaths and scores of minor accidents on icy highways and streets. Snow was heaviest in the high mountains, on the Western Slope and in southern Colorado.

More than 10 inches piled up on Loveland Pass, 14 inches on Berthoud Pass and smaller amounts throughout the state.

W. B. Short and Jimmy of Emerson. Miss Virginia Johnson has returned to Little Rock after a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Johnson.

La. Col. and Mrs. S. B. Scott accompanied by their grandchildren, James and Sam Blake Scott, III, who have been their guests, spent Sunday in El Dorado with major Mrs. S. B. Scott and their new little son.

Miss Martha Mitchell has returned to Henderson State Teachers College, Arkadelphia after a holiday visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Mitchell.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Tompkins were the Thursday guests of their son, C. T. Tompkins, in Shreveport.

Mrs. Mary Montgomery and Tom McInnes were Thursday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Carlton McInnes in El Dorado.

An automatic appeal by Roche's attorneys, however, was expected to free the Korean War veteran.

Roche, a 27-year-old plumber's helper, started impressively ahead when Judge Goldstein passed his sentence.

Roche was convicted Nov. 9 for the murder of Dorothy Westwater, a Manhattan schoolgirl. The death sentence for Roche was mandatory because the jury made no recommendation for mercy.

Roche also confessed to the murders of waitress Marion Brown, taxi driver Alexander Jablonka, 45; Mrs. Rose Chronik, 55, and Sallie Edwards, 22.

Judges Would Set Up State Juvenile Dept.

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — A proposed bill that would set up an Arkansas juvenile department was endorsed today by the Arkansas Association of County Judges.

The judges unanimously adopted a resolution endorsing the proposed bill at the closing session of their annual convention.

Under the bill, a juvenile department would be created with a director in charge. The agency would handle cases of dependent, delinquent and neglected children referred from circuit and juvenile courts.

Twenty-six of the state's 75 county judges and 12 judges-elect attended today's session.

The judges were expected to vote later today on a resolution to petition the federal Department of Public Roads to give the state agency supervision over secondary road building by counties.

But that "lost wax" casting business has been so hampered, I meant to look it up, and didn't. And then the whole story came out in Tuesday's Journal.

Journal. Ray Vicker tells all about the wax and how it is known in the trade as the investment of the system.

Briefly, the "lost wax" casting process is an art of the ancient that we have had to revive in the modern day in order to reduce the cost of machining precision mechanical parts — and in certain instances to save lives.

For instance, the jet-engine program for aircraft depends entirely on "lost wax" castings.

Most of the turbine blades, which have to endure incredible heat in propulsion jet stream, is too hard to be finished by ordinary machine methods.

The blades are cast by a system so precise that no mechanical finishing is required.

Hot wax or plastic is poured into the die representing the shape of the wanted part.

The wax (or plastic) is buried in ceramic, or "invested," in ceramic, as the experts call it.

The ceramic shapes itself to the exact pattern, and then the wax is melted out, leaving a cavity.

molten metal is poured in, cooled, and then the ceramic shell is broken away — leaving a finished machine part.

The wax, as you noted, was melted out and the finished part was left.

Ray Vicker tells the fascinating history of "lost wax." It was one of man's earliest technical accomplishments.

The ancient Egyptians and Greeks used it. The Romans produced fine jewelry, and Benvenuto Cellini made some of his greatest metal statues with "lost wax."

It's odd how human affairs follow a cycle. Here is the cradle of mankind's oldest casting system, which languished and was forgotten in the Dark Ages, only to be revived by the requirements of today's latest invention... the jet engine.

An interesting program is expected to attract many farmers from Clark, Hempstead, Hot Springs, Howard, Nevada, Pike, Scott, and Van Buren counties.

Starting at 2 o'clock, the meeting will be held in the Legion Hut in Prescott, Arkansas, where the speaker will be the ladies and their men.

A representative of the Social Security Administration will explain Social Security to Farm Families.

The new law takes effect January 1, 1955, and two main changes concerning farm people will be discussed.

Old Purdie of Prescott, president will preside at the meeting.

Three directors will be elected and W. W. Denny, Secretary-Treasurer will present the annual report.

Also attending are the following: Brinkley, Jr. Jerome Hamilton, 46, of Glenwood, Ark. died in a hospital here yesterday afternoon from injuries suffered in a traffic accident earlier in the day.

State Trooper L. E. Gwin said the car in which Hamilton was riding was wrecked on Highway 17 five miles southwest of here when a tire blew out.

Four other persons in the car were injured, none critically.

"Lost Wax" Casting
The Jet Engine Puts
a Puzzle Into Print

If you have a mechanical bent you must have been intrigued, as was, by industry's increasing references in recent years to the "lost wax" casting system.

Developments are familiar with various casting processes. Here on The Star we handle close to 1,000 pounds of cast metal each production day, type slugs from the linotypes, column rules and blank slugs from the Electrotype plant, and the castings, national news pictures and local advertising illustrations which are cast from paper matrices into metal plates in the stereotype department.

But that "lost wax" casting business has been so hampered, I meant to look it up, and didn't. And then the whole story came out in Tuesday's Journal.

'Lost Wax' Casting

The Jet Engine Puts

a Puzzle Into Print

If you have a mechanical bent you must have been intrigued, as was, by industry's increasing references in recent years to the "lost wax" casting system.

Developments are familiar with various casting processes. Here on the Star we handle close to 1,000 pounds of cast metal each production day, type slugs from the linotypes, column rules and blank slugs from the Electrotype.

But that "lost wax" casting business has been so hampered, it meant to look it up and didn't. And then the whole story came out in Tuesday's Journal.

Journal. Ray Vicker tells all about the wax and how it is used.

The process belongs to what is known in the trade as the investment or lost wax casting. "Investment" is an art of the ancient that we have had to revive in the modern day in order to reduce the cost of machining precision mechanical parts — and in certain instances to use a system so precise that no mechanical finishing is required.

For instance, the jet-engine program for aircraft depends entirely on "lost wax" castings. The mold of the turbine blades, which have to endure incredible heat in propulsion jet stream, is too hard to be finished by ordinary machine methods. The blades are cast by a system so precise that no mechanical finishing is required.

Hot wax or plastic is poured into a die representing the shape of the wanted part. The wax is buried in ceramic, or "invested," in ceramic, as the ceramic shapes itself to the exact pattern, and then the wax is melted out, leaving a cavity. Metal is poured in, cooled, and then the ceramic shell is broken away — leaving a finished machine part. The wax, as you noted, was "lost."

Ray Vicker tells the fascinating history of "lost wax." It was one of man's earliest technical accomplishments. The ancient Egyptians and Greeks used it. The Romans produced fine jewelry, and Benvenuto Cellini made some of his greatest metal statues with "lost wax."

It's odd how human affairs follow a cycle. Here is the cause of mankind's oldest casting system, which languished and was forgotten in the Dark Ages, only to be revived by the requirements of today's latest invention... the jet engine.

China Warned U. S. to Protect Isle of Formosa

WASHINGTON (AP) — Red China has warned the United States that it will protect the island of Formosa.

The Chinese government said it would use force to prevent the United States from taking any action to remove the island from its control.

Secretary of State Dulles made this statement yesterday in announcing that a mutual security pact will be signed with the Chinese Nationalist government in Formosa in the next few days.

He said the treaty means U.S. retaliation against any Red invasion of the island.

"Lost Wax" Casting
The Engine Puts
A Puzzle Into Print

If you have a mechanical bent you must have been intrigued, as was, by industry's increasing references in recent years to the "lost wax" casting system.

Developments are familiar with various casting processes. Here on the Star we handle close to 1,000 pounds of cast metal each production day, type slugs from the linotype, column rules and the castings, national news pictures and local advertising illustrations which are cast from paper matrices into metal plates in the stereotype department.

But that "lost wax" casting business has been a puzzle to me. I mean to look it up, and didn't. And then the whole story came out in Tuesday's Star.

Journal, Ray Vicker tells all about the wax and how it is used. The process belongs to what is known in the trade as the investment method of casting. "Investment" is an art of the ancient which we have had to revive in the modern day in order to reduce the cost of machining precision mechanical parts — and in certain instances to save a system so precise that it is too hard to be machined at all.

For instance, the jet-engine program for aircraft depends entirely on "lost wax" castings. The mold of the turbine blades, which have to endure incredible heat in propulsion jet stream, is too hard to be finished by ordinary machine methods. The blades are cast by a system so precise that no mechanical finishing is required.

The "lost wax" process. Hot wax or plastic is poured into a die representing the shape of the wanted part. The wax is buried in ceramic, or "invested," in ceramic, as the ceramic shapes itself to the exact pattern, and then the wax is melted out, leaving a cavity. Metal is poured in, cooled, and then the ceramic shell is broken away — leaving a finished machine part. The wax, as you noted, was "lost."

Ray Vicker tells the fascinating history of "lost wax." It was one of man's earliest technical accomplishments. The ancient Egyptians and Greeks used it. The Romans produced fine jewelry, and Benvenuto Cellini made some of his greatest metal statues with "lost wax."

It's odd how human affairs follow a cycle. Here is the cause of mankind's oldest casting system, which languished and was forgotten in the Dark Ages, and now is revived by the requirements of today's latest invention... the jet engine.

An interesting program is expected to attract many farmers from Clark, Hempstead, Hot Springs, Howard, Nevada, Pike, Scott, and Van Buren counties, Dec. 7, 8 and 9, for the annual stockholders meeting of the national Farm Loan Association of Arkansas.

Starting at 2 o'clock, the meeting will be held in the Legion Hut in Prescott. Refreshments will be served by the ladies and there will be door prizes for both men and women.

A representative of the Social Security Administration will explain Social Security to Farm Families. The new law takes effect January 1, 1955, and two main changes concerning farm people will be discussed.

Bill Purdie of Prescott, president will preside at the meeting. Three directors will be elected and W. W. Denny, Secretary-Treasurer will present the annual report.

Also attending the meeting will be a representative of the Social Security Administration, a representative of the Federal Reserve Bank, and a representative of the Federal Reserve Bank.

Colorado Gets Major Snowstorm

DENVER (AP) Colorado's first major snowstorm of the season has hit the state under a white blanket today and the weather bureau predicted light snow would continue most of the day.

The storm caused at least four deaths and scores of minor accidents on icy highways and streets. Snow was heaviest in the high mountains, on the Western Slope and in southern Colorado. More than 10 inches piled up on Loveland Pass, 14 inches on Berthoud Pass and smaller amounts throughout the state.

Judges Would Set Up State Juvenile Dept.

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — A proposed bill that would set up an Arkansas juvenile department was endorsed today by the Arkansas Association of County Judges.

The judges unanimously adopted a resolution endorsing the proposed bill at the closing session of their annual convention.

Under the bill, a juvenile department would be created with a director in charge. The agency would handle cases of dependent, delinquent and neglected children referred from circuit and juvenile courts.

Twenty-six of the state's 75 county judges and 12 judges-elect attended today's session.

The judges were expected to vote today on a resolution to petition the State Highway Department to petition the Federal Bureau of Public Roads to give the state agency supervision over secondary road building by counties.

But that "lost wax" casting business has been so hampered, I meant to look it up, and didn't. And then the whole story came out in Tuesday's Journal.

Journal. Ray Vicker tells all about the wax and how it is used in the process.

The process belongs to what is known in the trade as the investment or lost wax process. "Investment" is an art of the ancient Greeks that we have had to revive in the modern day in order to reduce the cost of machining precision mechanical parts — and in certain instances to save lives.

An automatic appeal by Roche's attorneys, however, was expected to free the Korean War veteran. Roche, a 27-year-old plumber's helper, started impressively ahead when Judge Goldstein passed his sentence.

Roche was convicted Nov. 9 for the murder of Dorothy Westwater, a Manhattan schoolgirl. The death sentence for Roche was mandatory because the jury made no recommendation for mercy.

Roche also confessed to the murders of waitress Marion Brown, 17; taxi driver Alexander Jablonka, 45; Mrs. Rose Chronik, 65, and Sallie Edwards, 22.

PSC Suspends Refund Order to AP&L Firm

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The Arkansas Public Service Commission today suspended its order requiring Arkansas Power & Light Co. to refund to its customers "excess" rates of electricity.

The commission's action was taken after a hearing on the matter. It said that the company had failed to provide adequate evidence to support its request for a refund.

Porkers Look Better Against Phillips Team

By The Associated Press

HOUSTON (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals were expected today to complete negotiations with the Western League for the transfer of their franchise to Omaha.

The Cardinals received permission from the A. A. yesterday to do business with the Western League. The only thing that stands in the way of a matter of some $30,000 or $40,000.

The Westerns have reluctantly agreed to part with Omaha but have asked the Cardinals for $100,000 damages. The Cardinals feel the price is much too high but have agreed to negotiate. A meeting was scheduled for today.

If Omaha becomes a member of the Association it will become the second city to shift to that league from the Western this week. Denver already has been drafted to face over the Kansas City Royals.

The Cardinals have already determined damages due the Western in the Denver case.

Contract Bad Deal, Avows Ex-AP&L Man

By Elmore Denniston
Copyright 1954 by Elmore Denniston Distributed by NEA Service

MEMPHIS (AP) — A former Arkansas Power & Light Co. executive has sharply criticized the controversial Dixon-Yates contract as a deal in which "the public can't win and Dixon-Yates can't lose."

W. H. Howze, pronounced "Howze" of West Memphis, Ark., retired after 35 years with AP&L, told the Commercial Appeal the contract is "good for the stockholders but damn bad for the public."

Howze said he felt obliged to speak out, although he is a stockholder in AP&L, owned by Middle South Utilities, Inc., which forms half of the Dixon-Yates combine.

The private power combine has a contract to build a 107 million dollar generating plant at West Memphis to pipe power into the Tennessee Valley Authority's public power system.

The Atomic Energy Commission would buy the 600,000 kilowatt unit to replace TVA power being absorbed by atomic plants in the TVA area.

Howze, a former AP&L district manager who built and managed a number of the company's East Arkansas properties, urged that Memphis build its own huge generating plant. The city could erect a 600,000 kilowatt plant at nearby Fulton, Tenn., "for around 90 million dollars," he said.

He directed much of his criticism at the Mississippi riverbank location of the proposed plant. "There is no foundation at the West Memphis site and they are going to be great," he said.

"Anyone who knows anything about the land and generation capacity and it's all gumbo. We dug for tower foundations 125 feet down once and never struck anything solid."

The Mississippi often shifts its bed, Howze said, and suppose the plant were washed away and it takes three years to get it back in shape?

"Under terms of their contract," he said, "Dixon-Yates wouldn't lose a cent. They'd still be getting their payments from the government whether they were able to supply the power or not."

The proposal that Memphis build the extra generation capacity was a surprise for the Dixon-Yates plan. Backers of TVA call the Dixon-Yates contract an attack on TVA's cheap power. Backers of Dixon-Yates, including President Eisenhower, say the contract is in the public's best interest.

Madness in the Spring

Rupert eased the car past the plucked turkeys and into David Man's Gulch. He stopped, savoring Greg's expression. The place was no longer a ghost town. It was alive! It was real. Along the road clattered cowboys on horseback, men and women swarmed the boardwalks.

"Where did you get the extras?" Greg asked at last, his eyes on some synthetic cowboys, judging by the way they bounced, riding was a new and painfully acquired art to these sons of the rugged West.

"Members of the Chamber of Commerce. They got here before the cooks did and Hannah was feeding the whole outfit before she left."

There was a hollow feeling in the pit of Greg's stomach. "Hannah's gone!"

Rupert's narrow eyes brushed his face. "Several days ago," Greg let him with a muttered excuse about seeing Daggett. The latter lay in bed with his eyes closed. Thinking he was asleep, Greg was tipping out when the old man said, "Have a cigarette."

"Fine. How have you been having?" Greg's voice was casual but he was alarmed. Weeks had passed since Daggett decided to take things easy. He should have set springing go. God be with him, down he ponders this tremendous scene, this whole experience in green, as if it was his own. I don't have to own it. For 50 years, after this, and he touched his shriveled hand happened to me, I've been trying to get it back to the time and place when it was whole. And you made it possible. Gave me a second spring. But no one can escape indefinitely from his own time and place. In the long run, you have to let the mad seasons go with the spring. It takes four seasons to make a year."

"You'll need someone," Greg said. "When Hannah gets back, we'll..."

talk things over. Unless she marries Philip Kirby, of course. And he's a persistent fellow in a non-stop spring smart tactics, shows he's putting pressure on her, he just looks unhappy."

"Where's Hannah?" Greg was righteously indignant. "If I had dreamed that she would walk out on me..."

"She's doing an errand for me. She'll be back in time for Opening."

"She'll be back for the Grand Opening. But where was she to night? Who was she with? What was she doing? As he left Daggett Greg found himself smoldering at the thought of Philip Kirby. Kirby knew Hannah all right, appearing to her pity, making her sorry for him. She probably was by marrying him. Well, why not? He was famous, he'd be making a fabulous salary, he'd be able to give a woman everything she wanted. Of course, she'd marry him."

Where was Kirby anyhow? You'd think, as a matter of simple gratitude, as a common courtesy, he'd be on hand to say thank you to the guy who had landed him a juicy contract. Unless he was with Hannah.

But Kirby wasn't with Hannah. He emerged from a group of photographers and came running toward Greg. His hand out.

"Seaver, I didn't know you were back. You really pulled it off. Let me buy you a drink to celebrate." As soon as he had finished his drink Greg made his escape. As he went across the road to the Last Chance Hotel the stagecoach and covered wagon were setting off for the station to pick up the first of the crowd. Daggett turned his head as Greg came in and smiled.

"It was a nice holiday," Daggett said at last. "It's over for you now. You've a big job ahead of you. Now and then, I suppose you'll still find yourself looking for the other side of the moon. But the oxygen is rare, they say." Along the road kerosene lamp were lighted. A horse stumped. Footsteps died out. Everyone was tired. They had done the best they could. There was nothing now but to wait for the morning train and the Grand Opening.

A voice rose softly, the voice of the Bellandine the wind that blew over the prairies and hills, coming from nowhere from the other side of the moon.

Yoshida Lashes Out at Jap Critics

By JIM BECKER

TOKYO (AP) — Prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida, in stinging replies to his Diet (Parliament) critics, said today, "It is very necessary for the Japanese to know the real meaning of the Communist offensive."

And he snapped at opponents seeking to oust him: "The Liberal party will decide when and whether I should step down."

The 78-year-old leader fought back at critics who attacked him for being too "pro-American."

"It is necessary to oppose communism," he said. "It is called alignment with America only, if say all the free world is aligned with America only."

To questioners in the Diet who urged expansion of trade with the Communists, he declared:

"The Communist redies pour sugar-coated words at Japanese ears," he said. "At the same time, the Communist radios streamed to Southeast Asian tell them Japan is being reformed for renewed aggression under American instigation. It is foolish to buy Communist words at face value."

Citizens Commend Highway Commission

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The State Highway Commission has been commended for its fiscal policies by a private citizens group.

The report, submitted to the Arkansas Legislative Council yesterday, was from the fiscal subcommittee of the Committee on Administration. The C.A.R. is successor to the Citizens Highway Committee of the Committee on Administration that passed the 1953 legislature.

Members of the subcommittee who approved the report are T.M. Martin, president of Lion Oil Co.; Verne Tindall, Stuttgart rice farmer and businessman, and Sam Crockett, Little Rock, a member of the 1953 Highway Audit Commission.

The subcommittee report said in part that previous actions and policies of the highway commission "should justify our faith that the people of the state have received and will continue to receive a full dollar's worth of work and materials for each highway dollar invested."

Remington Death Brings Jury Probe

SCRANTON, Pa. (AP) — A federal grand jury was called to session here today to investigate the slaying of William W. Remington, former government economist convicted of perjury in a Communist espionage case.

Two physicians who tried vainly to save the 37-year-old economist's life at Lewisburg (Pa.) Federal Penitentiary last week were summoned to testify on Remington's injuries. They are Dr. Charles Tomlinson, prison physician, and Dr. Leon Wilkin of Milton, Pa.

talk things over. Unless she marries Philip Kirby, of course. And he's a persistent fellow in a non-stop spring smart tactics, shows he's putting pressure on her, he just looks unhappy."

"Where's Hannah?" Greg was righteously indignant. "If I had dreamed that she would walk out on me..."

"She's doing an errand for me. She'll be back in time for Opening."

"She'll be back for the Grand Opening. But where was she to night? Who was she with? What was she doing? As he left Daggett Greg found himself smoldering at the thought of Philip Kirby. Kirby knew Hannah all right, appearing to her pity, making her sorry for him. She probably was by marrying him. Well, why not? He was famous, he'd be making a fabulous salary, he'd be able to give a woman everything she wanted. Of course, she'd marry him."

Where was Kirby anyhow? You'd think, as a matter of simple gratitude, as a common courtesy, he'd be on hand to say thank you to the guy who had landed him a juicy contract. Unless he was with Hannah.

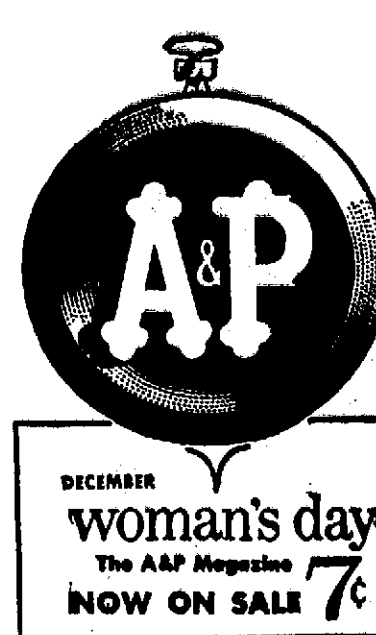

But Kirby wasn't with Hannah. He emerged from a group of photographers and came running toward Greg. His hand out.

"Seaver, I didn't know you were back. You really pulled it off. Let me buy you a drink to celebrate." As soon as he had finished his drink Greg made his escape. As he went across the road to the Last Chance Hotel the stagecoach and covered wagon were setting off for the station to pick up the first of the crowd. Daggett turned his head as Greg came in and smiled.

"It was a nice holiday," Daggett said at last. "It's over for you now. You've a big job ahead of you. Now and then, I suppose you'll still find yourself looking for the other side of the moon. But the oxygen is rare, they say." Along the road kerosene lamp were lighted. A horse stumped. Footsteps died out. Everyone was tired. They had done the best they could. There was nothing now but to wait for the morning train and the Grand Opening.

A voice rose softly, the voice of the Bellandine the wind that blew over the prairies and hills, coming from nowhere from the other side of the moon.

Contract Bad Deal, Avows Ex-AP&L Man

By Elmore Denniston
Copyright 1954 by Elmore Denniston Distributed by NEA Service

MEMPHIS (AP) — A former Arkansas Power & Light Co. executive has sharply criticized the controversial Dixon-Yates contract as a deal in which "the public can't win and Dixon-Yates can't lose."

W. H. Howze, pronounced "Howze" of West Memphis, Ark., retired after 35 years with AP&L, told the Commercial Appeal the contract is "good for the stockholders but damn bad for the public."

Howze said he felt obliged to speak out, although he is a stockholder in AP&L, owned by Middle South Utilities, Inc., which forms half of the Dixon-Yates combine.

The private power combine has a contract to build a 107 million dollar generating plant at West Memphis to pipe power into the Tennessee Valley Authority's public power system.

The Atomic Energy Commission would buy the 600,000 kilowatt unit to replace TVA power being absorbed by atomic plants in the TVA area.

Howze, a former AP&L district manager who built and managed a number of the company's East Arkansas properties, urged that Memphis build its own huge generating plant. The city could erect a 600,000 kilowatt plant at nearby Fulton, Tenn., "for around 90 million dollars," he said.

He directed much of his criticism at the Mississippi riverbank location of the proposed plant. "There is no foundation at the West Memphis site and they are going to be great," he said.

"Anyone who knows anything about the land and generation capacity and it's all gumbo. We dug for tower foundations 125 feet down once and never struck anything solid."

The Mississippi often shifts its bed, Howze said, and suppose the plant were washed away and it takes three years to get it back in shape?

"Under terms of their contract,"

Rupert eased the car past the picked-up truck and into Dead Man's Gulch. He stopped, saving Greg's expression. The place was no longer a ghost town. It was alive. It was real. Along the road clattered cowboys on horseback, men and women swarmed the boardwalks.

"Where did you get the extras?" Greg asked at last, his eyes on some synthetic cowboys, judging by the way they bounced, riding was a new and painfully acquired art to these sons of the rugged West.

"Members of the Chamber of Commerce. They got here before the cooks did and Hannah was feeding the whole outfit before she left."

There was a hollow feeling in the pit of Greg's stomach. "Hannah's gone!"

Rupert's narrow eyes brushed his face. "Several days ago," Greg let him with a muttered excuse about seeing Daggett. The latter lay in bed with his eyes closed. Thinking he was asleep, Greg was tipping out when the old man said, "Have a cigarette."

"Fine. How have you been having?" Greg's voice was casual but he was alarmed. Weeks had passed since Daggett decided to take things easy. He should have set things right. God be with him, Greg thought. God be with him, Greg thought. God be with him, Greg thought.

"An adventure in spring at my time of life is something. It's only common sense to know when to get springing. God be with him, Greg thought. God be with him, Greg thought. God be with him, Greg thought."

"But," Greg asked and then, considering the old man's condition and the ambiguity of his question, he could have kicked himself.

"I've about exhausted the possibilities of this sort of thing. After the Grand Opening, anything else would be anticlimax. I don't want the trip to taper off."

Yoshida Lashes Out at Jap Critics

By JIM BECKER

TOKYO (AP) — Prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida, in stinging replies to his Diet (Parliament) critics, said today, "It is very necessary for the Japanese to know the real meaning of the Communist offensive."

And he snapped at opponents seeking to oust him: "The Liberal party will decide when and whether I should step down."

The 78-year-old leader, fought back at critics who attacked him for being too "pro-American."

"It is necessary to oppose communism," he said. "It is called alignment with America only, if say all the free world is aligned with America only."

To questioners in the Diet who urged expansion of trade with the Communists, he declared:

"The Communist redies pour sugar-coated words at Japanese ears," he said. "At the same time, the Communist radios streamed to Southeast Asian tell them Japan is being reformed for renewed aggression under American instigation. It is foolish to buy Communist words at face value."

Yoshida Lashes Out at Jap Critics

By JIM BECKER

TOKYO (AP) — Prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida, in stinging replies to his Diet (Parliament) critics, said today, "It is very necessary for the Japanese to know the real meaning of the Communist offensive."

And he snapped at opponents seeking to oust him: "The Liberal party will decide when and whether I should step down."

The 70-year-old leader fought back at critics who attacked him for being too "pro-American."

"It is necessary to oppose communism," he said. "It is called alignment with America only, if you all the free world is aligned with America only."

To questioners in the Diet who urged expansion of trade with the Communists, he declared:

"The Communist regime pour sugar-coated words at Japanese ears," he said. "At the same time, the Communist regime is working to destroy Japan."

Yoshida said the Communist regime was working to destroy Japan. He said the Communist regime was working to destroy Japan.

Yoshida Lashes Out at Jap Critics

To questioners in the Diet who urged expansion of trade with the Communists, he declared:

"The Communist regime pour sugar-coated words at Japanese ears," he said. "At the same time, the Communist radio waves stream to Southeast Asia tell them Japan is being reformed for renewed aggression under American instigation. It is foolish to buy Communist words at face value."

Citizens Commend Highway Commission

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The State Highway Commission has been commended for its fiscal policies by a private citizens group.

The report, submitted to the Arkansas Legislative Council yesterday, was from the fiscal subcommittee of the Committee on Administration. The subcommittee was headed by Rep. J. B. McMillin.

Members of the subcommittee who approved the report are T. M. Martin, president of Lion Oil Co.; Verne Tindall, Stuttgart rice farmer and businessman, and Sam Crockett, Little Rock, a member of the 1953 Highway Audit Commission.

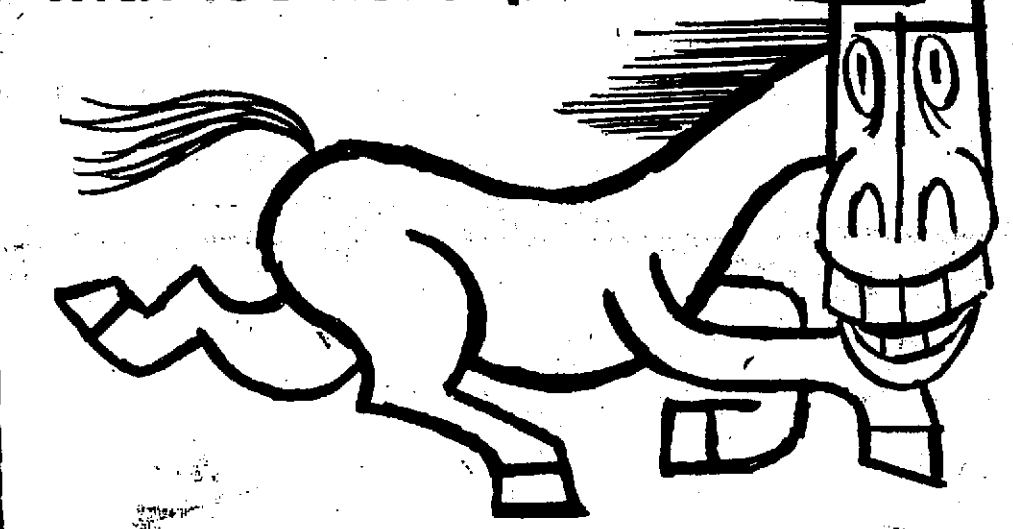

The subcommittee report said in part that previous actions and policies of the highway commission "should justify our faith that the people of the state have received and will continue to receive a full dollar's worth of work and materials for each highway dollar invested."

Remington Death Brings Jury Probe

SCRANTON, Pa. (AP) — A federal grand jury was called to session here today to investigate the slaying of William W. Remington, former government economist convicted of perjury in a Communist espionage case.

Two physicians who tried vainly to save the 37-year-old economist's life at Lewisburg (Pa.) Federal Penitentiary last week were summoned to testify on Remington's injuries. They are Dr. Charles Tomlinson, prison physician, and Dr. Leon Wilkin of Milton, Pa.

Contract Bad Deal, Avows Ex-AP&L Man

By Elmore Denniston
Copyright 1954 by Elmore Denniston Distributed by NEA Service

MEMPHIS (AP) — A former Arkansas Power & Light Co. executive has sharply criticized the controversial Dixon-Yates contract as a deal in which "the public can't win and Dixon-Yates can't lose."

W. H. Howze, pronounced "Howze" of West Memphis, Ark., retired after 35 years with AP&L, told the Commercial Appeal the contract is "good for the stockholders but damn bad for the public."

Howze said he felt obliged to speak out, although he is a stockholder in AP&L, owned by Middle South Utilities, Inc., which forms half of the Dixon-Yates combine.

The private power combine has a contract to build a 107 million dollar generating plant at West Memphis to pipe power into the Tennessee Valley Authority's public power system.

The Atomic Energy Commission would buy the 600,000 kilowatt unit to replace TVA power being absorbed by atomic plants in the TVA area.

Howze, a former AP&L district manager who built and managed a number of the company's East Arkansas properties, urged that Memphis build its own huge generating plant. The city could erect a 600,000 kilowatt plant at nearby Fulton, Tenn., "for around 90 million dollars," he said.

He directed much of his criticism at the Mississippi riverbank location of the proposed plant. "There is no foundation at the West Memphis site and they are going to be great," he said.

"Anyone who knows anything about the land and generation capacity and it's all gumbo. We dug for tower foundations 125 feet down once and never struck anything solid."

The Mississippi often shifts its bed, Howze said, and suppose the plant were washed away and it takes three years to get it back in shape?

"Under terms of their contract," he said, "Dixon-Yates wouldn't lose a cent. They'd still be getting their payments from the government whether they were able to supply the power or not."

The proposal that Memphis build the extra generation capacity was a surprise for the Dixon-Yates plan. Backers of TVA call the Dixon-Yates contract an attack on TVA's cheap power. Backers of Dixon-Yates, including President Eisenhower, say the contract is in the public's best interest.

Rupert eased the car past the picked-up car and into the Man's Gulch. He stopped, saving Greg's expression. The place was no longer a ghost town. It was alive. It was real. Along the road clattered cowboys on horseback, men and women swarmed the boardwalks.

"Where did you get the extras?" Greg asked at last, his eyes on some synthetic cowboys, judging by the way they bounced, riding was a new and painfully acquired art to these sons of the rugged West.

"Members of the Chamber of Commerce. They got here before the cooks did and Hannah was feeding the whole outfit before she left."

There was a hollow feeling in the pit of Greg's stomach. "Hannah's gone!"

Rupert's narrow eyes brushed his face. "Several days ago," Greg let him with a muttered excuse about seeing Daggett. The latter lay in bed with his eyes closed. Thinking he was asleep, Greg was tipping out when the old man said, "Have a cigarette."

"Fine. How have you been having?" Greg's voice was casual but he was alarmed. Weeks had passed since Daggett decided to take things easy. He should have set things going. God be with him, down with this tremendous scene, this whole experience in green, as if it was his own. I don't have to own it. For 50 years, after this, and he touched his shriveled hand to his forehead.

"I've been trying to get it done the time and place when it was whole. And you made it possible. Gave me a second spring. But no one can escape indefinitely from his own time and place. In the long run, you have to let the mad seasons to make a year."

"You'll need someone," Greg said. "When Hannah gets back, we'll talk things over. Unless she marries Philip Kirby, of course. And he's a persistent fellow in a non-holding court. He's got a way of putting pressure on her, he just looks unhappy."

"Where's Hannah?" Greg was righteously indignant. "If I had known that she would walk out on me, I'd be back in time for Opening."

"She's doing an errand for me. She'll be back in time for Opening."

"She'll be back for the Grand Opening. But where was she to night? Who was she with? What was she doing? As for Daggett, Greg found himself smoldering at the thought of Philip Kirby. Kirby knew Hannah all right, appearing to her pity, making her sorry for him. She probably was by marrying him. Well, why not? He was famous, he'd be making a fabulous salary. He'd be able to give a woman everything she wanted. Of course, she'd marry him."

Where was Kirby anyhow? You'd think, as a matter of simple gratitude, as a common courtesy, he'd be on hand to say thank you to the guy who had landed him a juicy contract. Unless he was with Hannah.

But Kirby wasn't with Hannah. He emerged from a group of photographers and came running toward Greg. His hand out.

"Seaver, I didn't know you were back. You really pulled it off. Let me buy you a drink to celebrate." As soon as he had finished his drink Greg made his escape. As he went across the road to the Last Chance Hotel the stagecoach and covered wagon were setting off for the station to pick up the first of the crowd. Daggett turned his head as Greg came in and smiled.

"It was a nice holiday," Daggett said at last. "It's over for you now. You've a big job ahead of you. Now and then, I suppose you'll still find yourself looking for the other side of the moon. But the oxygen is rare, they say." Along the road kerosene lamp were lighted. A horse stumped. Footsteps died out. Everyone was tired. They had done the best they could. There was nothing now but to wait for the morning train and the Grand Opening.

A voice rose softly, the voice of the Bellandine the wind that blew over the prairies and hills, coming from nowhere from the other side of the moon.

HOPE STAR, HOPE, ARKANSAS

Yoshida Lashes Out at Jap Critics

By JIM BECKER

TOKYO (AP) — Prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida, in stinging replies to his Diet (Parliament) critics, said today, "It is very necessary for the Japanese to know the real meaning of the Communist offensive."

And he snapped at opponents seeking to oust him: "The Liberal party will decide when and whether I should step down."

The 78-year-old leader fought back at critics who attacked him for being too "pro-American."

"It is necessary to oppose communism," he said. "It is called alignment with America only, if say all the free world is aligned with America only."

To questioners in the Diet who urged expansion of trade with the Communists, he declared:

"The Communist regime pour sugar-coated words at Japanese ears," he said. "At the same time, the Communist radioes streamed to Southeast Asian tell them Japan is being reformed for renewed aggression under American instigation. It is foolish to buy Communist words at face value."

Citizens Commend Highway Commission

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The State Highway Commission has been commended for its fiscal policies by a private citizens group.

The report, submitted to the Arkansas Legislative Council yesterday, was from the fiscal subcommittee of the Committee on Administration. The subcommittee is headed by Sen. J. B. McDaniel, Stuttgart rice farmer and businessman, and chairman of the Highway Committee.

Members of the subcommittee who approved the report are T. M. Martin, president of Lion Oil Co.; Verne Tindall, Stuttgart rice farmer and businessman, and chairman of the Highway Committee; and W. S. Fox, Pine Bluff lumberman and a member of the 1953 Highway Audit Commission.

The subcommittee report said in part that previous actions and policies of the highway commission "should justify our faith that the people of the state have received and will continue to receive a full dollar's worth of work and materials for each highway dollar invested."

Remington Death Brings Jury Probe

SCRANTON, Pa. (AP) — A federal grand jury was called to session here today to investigate the slaying of William W. Remington, former government economist convicted of perjury in a Communist espionage case.

Two physicians who tried vainly to save the 37-year-old economist's life at Lewisburg (Pa.) Federal Penitentiary last week were summoned to testify on Remington's injuries. They are Dr. Charles Tomlinson, prison physician, and Dr. Leon Wilkin of Milton, Pa.

talk things over. Unless she marries Philip Kirby, of course. And he's a persistent fellow in a non-holding court. He's got a way of putting pressure on her, he just looks unhappy."

"Where's Hannah?" Greg was righteously indignant. "If I had known that she would walk out on me, I'd be back in time for Opening."

"She's doing an errand for me. She'll be back in time for Opening."

"She'll be back for the Grand Opening. But where was she to night? Who was she with? What was she doing? As for Daggett, Greg found himself smoldering at the thought of Philip Kirby. Kirby knew Hannah all right, appearing to her pity, making her sorry for him. She probably was by marrying him. Well, why not? He was famous, he'd be making a fabulous salary. He'd be able to give a woman everything she wanted. Of course, she'd marry him."

Where was Kirby anyhow? You'd think, as a matter of simple gratitude, as a common courtesy, he'd be on hand to say thank you to the guy who had landed him a juicy contract. Unless he was with Hannah.

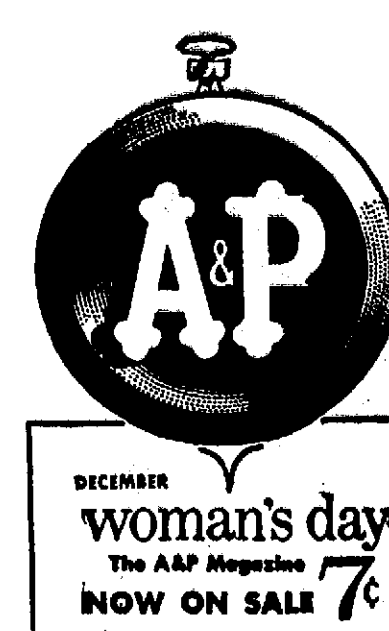

But Kirby wasn't with Hannah. He emerged from a group of photographers and came running toward Greg. His hand out.

"Seaver, I didn't know you were back. You really pulled it off. Let me buy you a drink to celebrate." As soon as he had finished his drink Greg made his escape. As he went across the road to the Last Chance Hotel the stagecoach and covered wagon were setting off for the station to pick up the first of the crowd. Daggett turned his head as Greg came in and smiled.

"It was a nice holiday," Daggett said at last. "It's over for you now. You've a big job ahead of you. Now and then, I suppose you'll still find yourself looking for the other side of the moon. But the oxygen is rare, they say." Along the road kerosene lamp were lighted. A horse stumped. Footsteps died out. Everyone was tired. They had done the best they could. There was nothing now but to wait for the morning train and the Grand Opening.

A voice rose softly, the voice of the Bellandine the wind that blew over the prairies and hills, coming from nowhere from the other side of the moon.

When 'Mop' Dropped
Nashville Passenger
Train It Promised Bus

Both Hope and Nashville having filed objection there will be a hearing on Missouri Pacific's proposal to discontinue daily bus service between the two cities, before the Public Service Commission in Little Rock at 1:30 p. m. Monday, December 6.

Barrell Hall, who handled Hope's protest in behalf of the local Chamber of Commerce, needs as strong a delegation as possible in the showdown before the PSC. Your editor will go with him, and other business men should volunteer also.

Both our towns feel pretty hot about Missouri Pacific's attempt to crawl out of a public obligation. If you remember, we raised no objection when the railroad company asked permission to discontinue rail passenger service between Hope and Nashville a few years ago. The railroad company pointed out at the time that passenger travel between the two cities would be taken care of by its bus firm, then, as now, operate two roundtrips daily.

If there wasn't a pledge then and there to maintain bus service, if we let the railroad out of the book, then nobody around these parts understands the King's English.

I don't have any operating figures on the Hope-Nashville bus service, but Missouri Pacific's attitude isn't doing too badly on the same route. The railroad freight, my information is that last month the Grayson, Nashville and Ashdown, Nashville and Pacific at Nashville 450 cars of Oak cement, and International Paper Co. in the first half of the month shipped over the same Nashville-Hope rail line 100 cars of pulp wood.

The railroad's not doing so bad. And when we let them drop an unprofitable passenger train back yard was this interest promise to continue the passenger bus.

The Missouri Pacific bus now operating is the only public passenger service between Nashville and Hope, and neither town can afford to let the big railroad company isolate it. The railroad's not doing so bad.

Operating a losing passenger train can run into some big figures, but I wonder if the Missouri Pacific is going to try to let us next Monday that one lone bus, and one driver, covering 112 miles a day in a Washington, D. C. to the same system, which is handling 600 cars a month on the same route in railroad freight.
